

Green Tips for March

Spring is near!

Time to start thinking about our gardens!

More than one-third of our food plants needs bees and other pollinators.

Grow pollinating plants that bloom in the spring, summer and fall.

Have fun deciding which annuals or perennials are best for you.

Searching for Refuge, Friendship, and Hope: Perspectives on Immigration — What Does It Means to "Be American" Today?

HELEN THORPE

AUTHOR OF THE NEWCOMERS AND 2018 DAYTON LITERARY PEACE PRIZE NOMINEE

Wednesday, April 3, 2019 7:00 pm Memorial Hall, 1225 Elm St. Over-the-Rhine, Cincinnati

Woman's City Club is again focusing on the complex issues of immigration at its National Speaker Forum, but this time from the unique perspective of Helen Thorpe. An award-winning immersive journalist and author, Thorpe herself is an immigrant who came to the U.S. as a young child and grew up as the "other" with strong ties to two countries, not becoming a citizen until she was 21. She is also the former first lady of Denver and of Colorado, so she understands on a very close level the impact that largescale immigration can have on the life and culture of a major city and on the workings of state governance.

Thorpe is known for the profound insight of her books and articles. In her address on April 3 she will explore what it means to "be American" as she presents her perspectives on immigration, multiculturalism, and America's role on the global stage.

In a country riven by these issues, her talk is both timely and relevant. With a growing number of immigrants and refugees making their home in Greater Cincinnati, her presentation will be of strong interest to our community.

Thorpe also speaks from her extensive experience with onsite research and reporting. She has authored three acclaimed works of narrative nonfiction that document in a human and intimate way the lives of immigrants, refugees, and veterans of foreign conflicts. Soldier Girls tells the stories of women soldiers in the Middle East. Just Like Us follows four Mexican girls in Denver as they graduate high school and go to college.

Her most recent book, The Newcomers, follows 22 teenage refugees and immigrants from Latin America and around the world during their first school year in Denver in an English language acquisition class. A New York Times reviewer wrote, "Thorpe's book is a reminder that in an era of nativism, some Americans are still breaking down walls and nurturing newcomers, the seeds of the great American experiment."

Tickets can be purchased online or by phone by calling Memorial Hall's box office at 513-977-8838.

The lecture costs $40; the lecture and the private reception with Ms. Thorpe, $140. Underwriter tickets start at $280.

More information about WCC and the National Speaker Forum is available at womanscityclub.org.

President's Column

Oh, America, land of the brave, here is the Syrian refugee of whom you've been so afraid, and he is nothing more than a kid who goes to the library on the weekend so he can prepare for class.

~ Helen Thorpe,

The Newcomers

Looking Forward to the Forum

I love our National Speaker Forum! Of all the events and programs WCC offers, it is my favorite. Not just because it is what led me to WCC — I came to hear Gail Collins in 2009, saw so many of my friends in the room, and joined that night but because it has introduced me to amazing women who are doing important work in their fields. Whether the speaker is a celebrated person like Naomi Tutu or Martha Raddatz, or someone I am completely unfamiliar with, such as Katty Kay or Robin Wright, I have never been disappointed.

This year I am especially eager to hear Helen Thorpe. I read her most recent book, The Newcomers, last spring after seeing a glowing review of it. It touched me deeply. Thorpe is a journalist and reports as objectively as possible, but she also spent a year in the classroom with the students she writes about and got to know many of the families. Their stories gave me greater insight into the struggles of people I know here in Cincinnati — a man who came to the U.S. as a political asylum refugee nearly three decades ago who is still trying to earn citizenship, and a family whose daughter is married to a man from Mexico who came here illegally, has been deported twice, and despite the fact he has been married to a U.S. citizen for eight years and has two American-born children lives in fear of being deported again if he has an accident, a speeding ticket, or any interaction with law enforcement.

I also read Thorpe's first book, Just Like Us, which is an even more heartbreaking story about four girls from Mexico, two who gained citizenship and two who cannot. Written in 2009 when immigration law was extremely restrictive and Thorpe was married to then-mayor of Denver John Hickenlooper, this book looks at the impact an influx of immigrants has on a metropolitan area as well as the personal challenges they face.

I hope you will join us on April 3 for the 2019 National Speaker Forum to hear Thorpe speak, from the heart and from experience, on the complex issues of immigration and what it means to "be American." I know you will not be disappointed.

Please consider being a patron or sponsor and attending the reception with Thorpe after the lecture. If you are part of an organization, you can support WCC as a cosponsor and receive eight lecture tickets plus two tickets to the VIP reception. Or come just for the lecture and bring your friends.

See you on April 3!

Program Report

WHO WINS, WHO LOSES:

FINDING BALANCE IN NEIGHBORHOOD DEVELOPMENT

Development is clearly a hot topic of interest — people from a wide range of Cincinnati neighborhoods overflowed the auditorium at the Fire Museum at WCC's February 26 program. Though the topic is often quite volatile, the discourse was civil as a panel of city officials and community activists addressed different aspects of community development.

The program was cosponsored by the Cincinnati Educational Justice Coalition, Community

Shares, Invest in Neighborhoods, LISC, Urban Appalachian Coalition, and Affordable Housing Advocates. Moderator Kathryne Gardette, past president of the Walnut Hills Redevelopment Foundation, opened the discussion by sharing the healthy development/healthy neighborhood comments posted by members of the audience.

Katherine Keough-Jurs, Director of City Planning, spoke about the role of her department and the Planning Commission, as well as the process by which developers obtain building permits and any needed zoning relief. City Council member Amy Murray, who chairs the Economic Growth and Zoning Committee, detailed how proposals for development move through that committee before going to City Council for final approval, and discussed ways community councils and individuals can connect with Council members and affect those decisions.

Clarence Taylor, Walnut Hills Area Council, spoke about the passion and patience required for a community to take a long term proactive view in shaping development as the neighborhood demographics change. In neighborhoods facing class change, he asked the audience to pay attention to the displacement of long term homeowners and to work to assure that older residents can stay in the neighborhood through affordable senior housing. Alexis Kidd-Zaffer of Seven Hills Neighborhood Services emphasized the careful balancing community organizations have to make in negotiating with community development corporations, developers, and the city. She said that in negotiating the West End's Community Benefits Agreement, the West End community didn't get all of its priorities but did make a positive impact on the project. Robie Suggs, Economic Development and Community Outreach Director of First Financial Bank, spoke about effective ways to plan and fund community-driven projects.

So much information was shared by the panel and during the Q &A that followed — it was a lively and solid introduction to a complex issue that often both energizes and divides communities. Follow up action steps included becoming a dues-paying member of one's community council and recreation center; getting on the email list to receive Planning Commission agendas and packets and reviewing them; attending the remainder of the series on tax abatements and development (see p. 4); and attending the Neighborhood Summit at Cintas Center on March 16. The program was livestreamed and can be heard <a href="https://example.com/here/beart-files/

Upcoming Programs

COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT SESSIONS ON

THE REAUTHORIZATION OF THE 1999 TAX ABATEMENT AGREEMENTS

Woman's City Club is cosponsoring two public engagement opportunities on potential policy changes due to the upcoming expiration of the 1999 Tax Exemption Agreement between the City of Cincinnati and the Cincinnati Public Schools Board, and subsequent renegotiations. The Cincinnati Educational Justice Coalition (CEJC) organized the events after learning that neither City Council nor the school board planned to host public information or public input sessions. In addition to WCC, CEJC is joined by Cincinnati Shares and multiple cosponsors, many of whom are already involved and advocating for their various constituencies on the issue of fair taxation.

Abatement policy and development processes are both complicated and hard to access. Don't miss these opportunities to learn and weigh in. According CEJC president Michelle Dillingham, "This is a critical issue that affects us all and could arguably be the most consequential policy change for Cincinnati for years to come. Our communities deserve a voice about what happens in their neighborhoods, and what happens to their tax dollars."

"Fair Tax Abatement Strategies for Neighborhoods"

Thursday, March 14, 6 - 8 pm Westwood United Methodist Church 3460 Epworth Ave., Cincinnati OH 45211

This session will focus on the current effects of the 1999 Tax Exemption Agreement. The agreement sets rules about tax abatement negotiation between the school board and city. The forum will also address the agreement's upcoming expiration.

Renegotiation has the potential to significantly change how our city handles development, and could impact transit, school funding, gentrification, preservation, affordable housing, and more.

Sponsors will collect participant concerns and share them with elected officials.

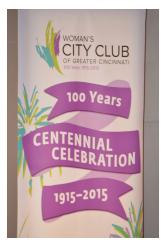

"A Community Call to Action for Fair Tax Abatements"

Wednesday, April 17, 6 - 8 pm Madisonville Recreation Center 5320 Stewart Ave., Cincinnati, OH 45227

This session will present the public's concerns collected across various public input sessions and offer strategies and tactical planning on how to best share them with elected officials.

Click here for more information about both sessions.

Got a Hankering for History? An Affinity for Archives?

As Woman's City Club plans for its future, we are also mindful that we need to keep good records of our past. The two history books that have been written about WCC – Andrea Tuttle Kornbluh's Lighting the Way, 1915-1965 and Rachel E. Powell's Lighting the Fire, Leading the Way, 1965-2015 – could not have been produced without access to WCC's extensive archives and well-ordered files of documents.

As records and photographs have become primarily digital, we have been less attentive to filing printed copies and archiving materials. We are seeking a member or friend to volunteer as the WCC historian/archivist, to work solo or to gather a group of people to assist. No special training or experience required, just a willingness to help us preserve our past to share it with future members!

Please contact Janet Buening by leaving a message at the WCC office – 513-751-0100 – or by email at wccpresident2018@gmail.com

HELEN O'NEAL

A 2013 WCC Feisty Woman, Helen O'Neal and her husband, Wendell, moved to Cincinnati in 1999. She wasted no time putting her talents to work in many places in the city.

Born in Mobile, Alabama, she was raised in Uniontown, near Selma. At the end of the fourth grade, she moved with her family to Buffalo, New York, going from a small-town segregated environment to a large urban environment in the inner city. She returned south for college, earning a bachelor's degree in social work, with a concentration in social group work, from Stillman College and an MSW from Atlanta University. Most of her working career was in school social work.

In Cincinnati she was a school community resource coordinator. "During my tenure with Hamilton County Family and Children First, I established parent resource centers in two inner-city schools – Rothenberg Elementary and Rees E. Price Elementary. During that period of time, the Woman's City Club was incredibly supportive to my work in both schools, and I officially became a member of Woman's City Club during that time," she said.

She's a member of Delta Sigma Theta and recently returned to the WCC board of trustees to fill an unexpired term ending in 2020. She's been active in the work done by WCC's CAAG – Catalyst for Achievement Action Group. Its purpose is to support city public school children's achievement and help ensure children at risk have a fighting chance of making a success of their lives.

O'Neal says most of her interests are art-related. She served about 13 years as a docent at the Delaware Art Museum when she lived in Wilmington while raising two daughters – Shani Jamila and Kita O'Neal – who are grown now. She's also been a docent at the Cincinnati Art Museum.

She's proud of the work she's done at the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center. "In 2008, my friend Algernon Johnson and I co-founded the Ambassadors (a support group at NURFC). Since 2008, the group has doubled in size and still offers monetary and volunteer support to the center," she said. O'Neal was elected the first president of the Ambassadors and served a two-year term.

Asked what she thinks WCC can do to make a difference in Cincinnati life, she said, "I deeply appreciate the work that Woman's City Club does in the community. I'd like to see it reach out more to newcomers to welcome them and encourage their involvement in community activities."

The Newcomers follows the lives of twenty-two immigrant teenagers as they land at South High School in Denver, Colorado. Ranging from fourteen to nineteen years of age, they come from nations convulsed by drought or famine or war. Many come directly from refugee camps; some arrive alone, having left or lost every other member of their original family.

Waking Up White — and Finding Myself in the Story of Race

By Debby Irving

Saturday, March 16, 2019, 10 am

Meet at the home of Joy Haupt

"For 25 years, Debby Irving sensed inexplicable racial tensions in her relationships. As a colleague and neighbor, she worried about offending people she dearly wanted to befriend. As an arts administrator, she didn't understand why her diversity efforts lacked traction. As a teacher, she found her best efforts to reach out to students and families of color left her wondering what she was missing. Then, in 2009, one 'aha!' moment launched an adventure of discovery and insight that drastically shifted her worldview and upended her life plan. In Waking Up White, Irving tells her often cringe-worthy story with such openness that readers will turn every page rooting for her — and ultimately for all of us."

"Debby Irving's powerful Waking Up White opens a rare window on how white Americans are socialized. Irving's focus on the mechanics of racism operating in just one life — her own — may lead white readers to reconsider the roots of their own perspectives — and their role in dismantling old myths. Readers of color will no doubt find the view through Irving's window fascinating, and telling."— Van Jones, author, Rebuild the Dream and The Green Collar Economy: How One Solution Can Fix Our Two Biggest Problems; co-host, CNN Crossfire.
