GREEN TIPS

for October

I've noticed a significant decrease in my gas use lately after I made a few changes in my driving habits.

The last two fill-ups, I've had a better MPG.

Here is what I recommend:

- Accelerate gently.
- Maintain a steady speed.
- Coast to decelerate.
- Remove excess weight.
- Avoid excessive idling.
- Inflate tires to correct pressure.

WCC'S 2019 NATIONAL SPEAKER – HELEN THORPE

WCC's National Speaker Forum continues its tradition of excellence by bringing journalist and author Helen Thorpe, a finalist for the 2018 Dayton Literary Peace Prize, as its speaker for the 2019 Forum. She will explore what it means to "be American" as she presents her perspectives on the issues of immigration, multiculturalism, and America's role on the global stage.

An award-winning immersive journalist known for the personal and profound insights of her books and articles, Thorpe was born in London to Irish parents and now lives in Denver, Colorado. She graduated magna cum laude from Princeton and received an MA in English literature from Columbia. Her work has appeared in The New York Times Magazine, The New Yorker, Texas Monthly, Harper's Bazaar, and Slate. She has authored three books.

Her first book, Just Like Us: The True Story of Four Mexican Girls Coming of Age in America, (2009), won the Colorado Book Award and was named one of the best books of the year by The Washington Post. The Denver Center for the Performing Arts adapted it for the stage as a play.

Soldier Girls: The Battles of Three Women at Home and at War, (2014), was named by TIME as the number one nonfiction book of the year. The Boston Globe called it "utterly absorbing, gorgeously written, and unforgettable." The New York Times said: "Thorpe achieves a staggering intimacy with her subjects."

Thorpe's newest book, The Newcomers: Finding Refuge, Friendship, and Hope in an American Classroom, (2017), follows the lives of 22 teenagers from around the world over the course of their first school year at South High School in Denver, in a beginner-level English Language Acquisition class. Many arrive directly from refugee camps, some after having lost one or both parents; collectively, their class represents a microcosm of the global refugee crisis as a whole.

The Newcomers tells the story of the challenges of adjusting to life in America. It follows the journeys of three families in particular—from Iraq, Burma, and the Democratic Republic of Congo—to illustrate what life is like in refugee-producing parts of the world. "Few books could be more vital, in this particular moment," writes Jeff Hobbs (The Short and Tragic Life of Robert Peace).

The WCC Book Club will read The Newcomers in January 2019. Save the meeting date: January 19 at 10 am, at a location TBA. Building a Strong Future

September was a busy and productive month for Woman's City Club, with the Town Hall on Public Education Funding, our Forum on Issue 1, and the Fifth Annual Women's Economic, Mental, and Physical Health Expo on Fountain Square.

Our first session of WCC 101 welcomed new members with an orientation to our activities and lively conversation with some of our board members and committee chairs. And plans are well underway for the Feist Tea in December and the 2019 National Speaker Forum with author Helen Thorpe, on April 3 at Memorial Hall.

I hope you will all attend our two October programs. WCC is a co-sponsor for "Who Are You to Judge" on Monday, October 8 at 6pm at the Urban League, 3458 Reading Road—a rare opportunity to meet the judicial candidates for the Court of Appeals and Common Pleas.

"Charting Our City's Future," our Forum on Wednesday, October 17 at 6:30pm at First Unitarian Church, 536 Linton Street, is a panel presentation on the proposed amendments to Cincinnati's Charter. Judicial candidates and amendments are not widely covered at other pre-election programs, so please invite your friends and colleagues to attend. We want all voters to be educated and empowered when they engage in casting their ballots in the upcoming election.

WCC does indeed offer an incredible number of excellent programs and diverse eventsall free and open to the public except for the National Speaker Forum and the Seasongood Luncheon, which are ticketed events. To continue these activities, and also to support our year-long kindergarten tutoring program and our annual education awards for college-bound high school seniors, we have just launched this year's Annual Pledge Drive. Please take a moment to read carefully the letter you recently received. It details how you can make a donation by check, online by credit card, or as a recurring gift through your bank or credit card. You can even earmark your donation for a specific area: Public Programs, Education Awards, Tutoring, or the essential WCC Administration.

The Pledge Drive runs through December 31, 2018, and while we don't have exciting thank-you gifts to send like PBS does, please know that we are very grateful for every donation, large or small. We rely on the countless volunteer hours our members collectively give to WCC's endeavors, but we also hope you will be equally generous with your financial support, so Woman's City Club, in its second century, can remain vibrant, relevant, and true to its mission to Educate, Empower, and Engage.

ENGAGED AUDIENCE HEARS THE PROS AND CONS OF ISSUE 1

On September 17, Woman's City Club welcomed a full house to learn about and discuss the pros and cons of Issue 1, the Neighborhood Safety, Drug Treatment, and Rehabilitation Amendment. This issue goes before the voters in November. The question addressed was, "Can we improve community health and safety by reducing the prison population?"

A very spirited and at times contentious debate ensued. Stephen JohnsonGrove, Deputy Director for Policy at the Ohio Justice and Policy Center, started the program off by outlining the ballot amendment to the state constitution. He played a significant role in drafting the amendment, which proposes to reduce criminal penalties for obtaining, possessing, and using illegal drugs. It also proposes to reduce the prison population and to direct available savings into rehabilitation programs and funds for crime victims, as well as other provisions. Its purpose is to address public concerns about the cost of growing prison populations, rising addiction rates, and the challenges of re-integrating former offenders back into society.

JohnsonGrove and other proponents contend drug abuse and addiction is a public health rather than a criminal justice problem. The grassroots organizers chose to go the constitutional amendment route because the state general assembly has been unable to pass these criminal justice reforms.

Elizabeth Hopkins, the staff lead of the AMOS Project, a multidenominational justice coalition, spoke of the need for these reforms from a personal perspective. She related the story of a friend sent to prison for drug possession, then overdosing and dying upon release, as well as her own struggle with addiction. Prison is never the solution, with limited treatment available. At its worst, prison can make people into hardened criminals. Referring to the over 700,000 people who signed the petition to put the amendment on the ballot, Hopkins expressed confidence in a grassroots campaign to marshal support for Issue 1.

Judge Jody Luebbers of the Hamilton Court of Common Pleas took the lead in voicing passionate opposition to the amendment. She said it should not be a constitutional amendment because of the difficulty in correcting problems likely to arise in implementation.

The second opposition speaker, Mark Piepmeier, Chief Assistant Prosecutor, Hamilton County Prosecutor's Office, concurred with this concern.

JohnsonGrove said that the state assembly will be passing implementing legislation and can correct problems. One is the need to reduce the allowed amount of fentanyl.

Judge Luebbers and Mr. Piepmeier also argued that addicted people need the threat of felony conviction to undergo treatment and to make drug courts effective; if treatment is completed the felony designation goes away. Moreover, the amendment assumes "one sizes fits all," when a judge's discretion is often necessary, depending on individual situations.

The proponents contend the amendment will make the community more safe; the opponents, less safe.

FIFTH ANNUAL WOMEN'S ECONOMIC, MENTAL AND PHYSICAL HEALTH EXPO

We could not have asked for a more perfect day! Blue skies, sunshine, a cool breeze and the largest number of agencies/ organizations that ever participated! "Equity" was the theme of The Fifth Annual Women's Economic, Mental and Physical Expo. This timely theme was perfectly attuned with the #MeToo movement and the current Washington debacle on whether to vote in a lifetime Supreme Court nominee who has been accused of sexual assault.

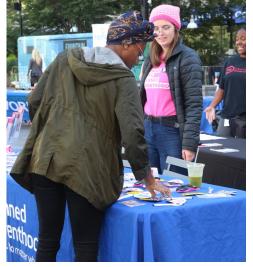

The 27 participating agencies provided invaluable information to help women achieve economic equity.

Susan Noonan opened the program highlighting two initiatives to "Eliminate Discrimination against Women in the Region." CEDAW – The Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women – has been described as the international bill of rights for women. It was instituted on September 3, 1981 and has been ratified by 189 states and nations.

The University of Cincinnati is conducting a complete gender analysis of all city departments, boards, and commissions and has established a Gender Task Force to evaluate and make recommendations to the city to improve gender equity. It will report results in late fall. Hamilton County simultaneously created a Commission on Women and Girls with many of the same goals but for the whole county.

Cathy Bailey (top left), Director of Greater Cincinnati Waterworks, spoke about the steps that the agency has taken to make lead-free water available for all families. Dr. Jill Bley (top right), a sexual assault clinical psychologist, discussed the effects on the brain of sexual assault and molestation. She referred to Dr. Christine Blasey Ford and the reasons women don't talk sometimes for 30 years after it happens.

Councilwomen Tamaya Dennard was called to Cleveland, so her very competent Community Relations Director, Dominique Francisco (lower right), spoke in her stead about some city programs to inspire leadership and confidence in our youth. The Pone dancers ended with their usual flair and energy – a truly great day!

BYO BAG TEAM HELPS KROGER PHASE OUT PLASTIC BAGS IN CINCINNATI

Members of WCC's Environmental Task Force, Mary Gerson, Lynn Hamamoto, and Jeanne Nightingale, together with other members of the BYO Bag Team, met with Lisa Zwack of Kroger's Sustainability Department at its corporate headquarters this week. The company was celebrating the roll-out of its phase-out of plastic bags by distributing groceries to its workers in new reusable cloth bags. We congratulated Kroger on its decision to phase out single-use plastic bags at all its stores by 2025, and we asked how we could help speed up the process. They welcomed our help to educate the public.

One snag among others: Folks tend to rely on plastic bags for the disposal of their kitchen waste. Making reusable cloth bags more available may in fact solve only part of the problem. What did we do before plastic? The New York Times calls it "the tyranny of convenience."

Yet we know we cannot wait seven more years to transition to reusable bags. Just look what's happening to our troubled Mill Creek! It's being choked up with plastic as it flows into the Ohio River. Each year the U.S. generates more than four million tons of plastic bags according to the EPA. Plastic is everywhere. It's in the gyres of garbage in the Pacific Ocean; it's in the bellies of the fish we eat; it's killing the seabirds; and it compromises our storm water systems, landfills and parks. We consume plastic micro-fibers with every glass of water we drink!

Many of the world's cities and countries are taking steps to eliminate plastic pollution through fees or total bans. Kroger approves of executing a total city-wide ban. Besides helping Kroger, our task force will continue to work with a growing number of grassroots activists and lobby Cincinnati City Council to adopt a total ban of single-use plastic bags in Cincinnati.

Co-Chair Environmental Action Group

Changing CO₂urse

Over the past five years, the Environmental Action Group has staged a monthly series of community conversations at St. Johns UU Church. Featuring speakers and films, we discuss issues of Environmental Justice and global climate change, the disproportionate impact of a warming climate on the inhabitants of our world.

This past summer and on into the fall, we have been watching a series of National Geographic documentaries: One Strange Rock. Each segment explores with stunning footage and from many human perspectives the wondrous fragility and improbable existence of this unique planet we call home. The first segment , GASP, probes the diaphanous layer of atmosphere from which each being, each human infant, takes its first breath. The second, STORM, studies the creative violence of the planet's very conception and how this turbulent force threatens our survival. The third, SHIELD, looks at the many ingenious ways our Earth protects itself from the sun's brutal rays and sustains the fragile balance of life on this strange rock. Next time, we will watch GENESIS, the story of how the mystery of life magically materialized from the dust of stars. All are welcome to join us for these screenings and post film discussions. Our next *Changing CO*₂*urse* is scheduled for Saturday, October 27. See flyer, page 11.

NEXT WOMAN'S CITY CLUB BOOK DISCUSSION

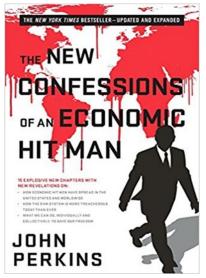

The New Confessions of an Economic Hitman

By John Perkins

10 am, Saturday, November 22, 2018

Location TBA

This is an updated version of the 2005 bestseller, the autobiographical Confessions of an Economic Hit Man, where Perkins describes working as a consultant for an engineering firm to convince leaders of second world and developing countries to undertake wildly overambitious infrastructure projects that would enrich them and the big U.S. engineering firms. In most cases, the projects would fail and leave nations beholden to U.S. banks or the World Bank. Leaders who refused to cooperate with such plans would be picked off by CIA-supported "jackals." This strategy of debt and fear was a deliberate U.S. policy to counter influence of the Soviet Union.

The new book argues that a similar strategy is underway all over the world, including developed countries. These are eyeopening and disturbing books.

Filmed across 45 countries, six continents, into outer space and from under the sea, ONE STRANGE ROCK is the extraordinary story of Earth – our curiously calibrated interconnected planet – and why it is uniquely brimming with life within a largely unknown but harsh cosmic arena.
