PUBLIC FORUM ARE OHIO'S PUBLIC SCHOOLS AT RISK?

Thursday, November 16
 7 pm via Zoom
Register Here

A panel will discuss two controversial measures affecting Ohio's public schools that the Ohio General Assembly passed in May: Availability of vouchers for all K-12 students for private school tuition and the transfer to the Governor's office of most of the powers of the Ohio Board of Education. Lawsuits were filed objecting to both these measures.

The legislation enacts major changes in the governance and funding of public education in Ohio, and critics are sounding the alarm. Why did the governor and the legislature propose these measures? Should we be worried? Or do they present important reforms benefiting both educational decision making and families seeking the best education for their children?

The new Universal Voucher program is siphoning funding for public schools for scholarships to attend private schools, which critics contend have no public oversight or accountability. The program will likely reduce the student population of individual public schools and therefore the funding each one receives. The rationale being offered: it empowers every family to choose the learning environment that best fits their children's needs.

Dani Isaacsohn

By reallocating to the governor the control of the majority-elected State Board of Education's oversight, policy and most administrative functions, critics point out that the legislation in effect removes the voice of practitioners and constituents on the state educational matters. The director of a new Department of Education and Workforce will also report to the governor. The rationale: to streamline the implementation of the governor's policies.

Katie Hofmann

Our expert panel will tell us what the state is up to with these initiatives, what the measures entail and their status, and what the likely impact will be for each: Dani Isaacsohn, Ohio State Assembly representative from our area; Katie Hofmann, our Ohio Board of Education member, elected in 2021; and Bill Phillis, who is leading the lawsuit against universal vouchers.

RESILIENCE

Our October book club selection was All That She Carried: The Journey of Ashley's Sack, a Black Family Keepsake by Tiya Miles. It's an historical sleuthing of several generations of brave Black women, starting in the 1850s, whose resilience is revealed through a sack, initially filled with life sustaining objects for an enslaved daughter about to be sold, and handed down into the 1920s. It's an inspiring read. We're fortunate to have so many sources of inspiration, many of which can be found in the selections for Woman's City Club's book club.

On October 5, Cincinnati & Hamilton County Public Library hosted Isabel Wilkerson as this year's Mary S. Stern lecturer at the Aronoff Center. It was yet another inspiring lecture by one of our former Woman's City Club National Speakers. She focused on The Warmth of Other Suns: The Epic Story of America's Great Migration, where she details, in three individual stories, Black migration from the Jim Crow south. It and Wilkerson's more recent book, Caste, have both been on the reading list of the book club. I remember when I first picked up Warmth – wondering whether I would ever finish such a lengthy volume – but, again and again, the book called me back to read on because of its extraordinary stories of resilience.

As we are struck by the horror of the situation in Israel and Gaza where the fragile peace has again been broken, we are once again challenged by events outside our control. I've seen so many interviews of people who have, yet again, been forced to survive the unthinkable. How do you go on when you've lost your loved ones so tragically?

President's Message

Dr. Edith Eva Eger, in The Choice: Embrace the Possible, answers this question by demonstrating how her experience in two different concentration camps informed her life's work:

Like the challah my mother used to make for our Friday night meal, this book has three strands: my story of survival, my story of healing myself, and the stories of the precious people I had the privilege of guiding to freedom.

What is common among all of these stories – and why we continue to be inspired by them, rather than lose hope, is the resilience of the people confronted with daunting, even horrific, circumstances. While we may not experience similar circumstances, these stories of resilience remind us that we can get through hard times if only we maintain our resolve to continue moving forward.

Resilience is defined as “the capacity to withstand or to recover quickly from difficulties; toughness.” It can take many forms. Sometimes, it's calmly assembling artifacts and treasures into a cloth bag to allow a child a chance for a future. And other times, it's surviving one more day amid violence. But, sometimes, it's as simple as getting up in the morning; cheering on our loved ones; and maintaining our home and career when it doesn't feel like it makes any difference. And as Dr. Egar shows, it's about making the choices, “big and small, that can lead us from trauma to triumph, from darkness to light, from imprisonment to freedom.”

OUR HONOREES ARE:

Louise Gomer Bangel's 60-plus years of activism have taken her from her family farm in Kansas, through anti-war protests in downtown Chicago, to the founding of the Center for Peace Education in Cincinnati. Throughout her journey, she has been instrumental in creating and advocating for peace and justice initiatives and education.

For the past 36 years, Lydia Morgan has organized committees to plan Cincinnati's Juneteenth celebration. She believes that Juneteenth is a part of American history. Everybody needs to be involved and know the true history of our country in order to make our community a healthier place to be.

During her career as an executive recruiter, Jan Seymour recruited for several Cincinnati area nonprofits, where she first learned about efforts to improve opportunities and provide services to those in need. Upon retirement, she actively volunteered with numerous organizations fighting racial discrimination as well as those serving immigrants, homeless families, and at-risk children.

Though preferring to stay out of the spotlight, David Siders is a behind-the-scenes leader and organizer of multiple activities that benefit the Cincinnati region. As Civic Engagement Coordinator at the Cincinnati and Hamilton County Public Library, David works tirelessly to ensure that all neighborhoods receive access to services and opportunities.

LESSONS IN CHEMISTRY (2022)

by
Bonnie Garmus

Saturday, November 18
10 am via Zoom

Lessons In Chemistry -- a comedy and a satire with charming touches of magic realism -- is in effect a feminist novel that is captivating readers everywhere. Research chemist Elizabeth Zott flees her sexist lab, then stars in a wildly popular cooking show where she incorporates chemistry lessons. Adventures ensue. The novel has a few nefarious characters, but more wonderful ones, including a precocious little girl, a dog that understands what people say, neighbors, and friends.

Available in multiple formats at booksellers, the public library, and online; the library may have only a few copies available to borrow.

Members and their friends or others by invitation are welcome, but you must RSVP to obtain the Zoom link:

AFFORDABLE HOUSING FORUM

Forum Report

If any Woman’s City Club member doubted the wisdom of the board’s endorsing passage of Issue 24, the Affordable Housing Amendment on the November 7 ballot, their doubts may well have disappeared on September 27.

That’s when Robin Wright-Pierce and Peg Fox presented the case for passage of the plan to address the shortage of affordable housing in Cincinnati and Hamilton County. Issue 24 applies only to Cincinnati, but it’s likely the county will benefit from the issue’s passage.

Wright-Pierce is the founder and CEO of the Wright Institute for Transformative Change and chair of the Issue 24 campaign. Fox is executive director of MARCC (Metropolitan Area Religious Coalition of Cincinnati) and has been advocating for affordable housing for years.

A lot of compelling information on the need for affordable housing was presented. The most humorous response in the Q&A portion of forum was Fox’s retort to someone’s concern about the amendment being so far down such a long ballot. “Start with 24 and go backwards,” she said.

Wright-Pierce said the amendment will do five things:

- Allow the people to invest in housing for all
- Allocate most of the funds generated to house those most in need
- Support current and future homeownership
- Provide emergency support services
- Give power to the people

WCC is one of 25 organizations endorsing passage of the amendment. Arguments for it are compelling: Rents rose more in Cincinnati in the last year than any city in the country. The average asking price for rent is $1,815 per month now. In 2020 it was $760 per month.

Federal money for affordable housing is drying up, leaving those with the lowest income vulnerable and with an insufficient supply of housing options. The 0.3% income tax restoration can be used only for truly affordable housing. With the increase, Cincinnati will still have the lowest city income tax in Ohio.

The amendment will create a community advisory board to partner with the city to ensure equitable distribution of the generated funds. Eighty percent of Black households in the city will qualify for the housing generated. Fifty-five to 60 percent of the total community will benefit.

Civic Engagement

WORKING FOR AN EQUITABLE & THRIVING COMMUNITY

I am writing this as the election is fast approaching. WCC has been active in voter registration and voter education. We have done much of this work through the Greater Cincinnati Voter Collaborative. My hope is that as we get more people registered and voting that people will begin to see the power of their vote.

I saw where someone posted that they had just exercised the “privilege” of voting. I certainly understood what that person was meaning to express. However, I think there are many non-participants in the voting process who have felt that voting is for the privileged and their vote will not matter. We hope our efforts, along with many others, will help people exercise their right to vote despite so many efforts to make voting hard or virtually impossible.

NATIONAL SPEAKER FORUM - SAVE THE DATE!

THE 30TH NATIONAL SPEAKER FORUM

FEATURING

JENN WHITE ~ HOST OF 1A
NATIONAL PUBLIC RADIO'S
MORNING TALK SHOW

TRUTH IN JOURNALISM
FRIDAY ~ MARCH 22, 2024 ~ 7:00 PM

Woman's City Club is proud to present JENN WHITE, host of 1A, National Public Radio's talk show airing nationally and on WVXU weekday mornings. The 1A program, whose name was inspired by the First Amendment's five freedoms, convenes a daily conversation about the most important issues of our time.

White is a seasoned journalist and podcast host, who has worked in public radio since 1999. She is skilled as a public speaker and has moderated numerous on-air gubernatorial and mayoral debates.

Her timely presentation, Truth in Journalism, will address one of our nation's most challenging issues. In response to our growing awareness of media inaccuracy and misinformation:

- What ethical practices must guide the reliable production and consumption of the daily news?
- How can we protect responsible reporting that is so essential to our democracy?

Watch for invitations to the event this winter, along with opportunities for cosponsorship and other ways to support the National Speaker Forum.

Other WCC activities around the election have been our endorsements of Issue 1, the Reproductive Rights Amendment on the Ohio Ballot, and Issue 24, the Affordable Housing Funding Amendment, on the ballot for Cincinnati voters. We held an educational forum on Issue 24 that was significant in furthering the understanding the facts of the amendment (see page 5).

Getting past this election and moving forward, the areas I see for our continued civic engagement are issues surrounding various OHIO legislative attempts to impact the business of public education. Our November 16 forum, "Are Ohio's Public Schools at Risk?" will inform, and perhaps inflame, us about legislative actions in Columbus affecting public schools. I suspect there will be many opportunities for WCC to be involved.

Another movement that I foresee our getting behind is the People Not Politicians amendment campaign being led by former Chief Justice Maureen O'Hara. It proposes a citizen-led process for drawing district borders for electing candidates for the State Assembly and Congress.

Carrying out Woman's City Club's mission to Educate, Engage and Empower isn't always easy, but I believe we truly make a difference!

WCC SPONSORED KINDERGARTEN TUTORING PROGRAM

The Education Action Group is happy to announce that our Woman’s City Club sponsored Kindergarten Tutoring Program is continuing! It will have the same Making Sense of Language Arts curriculum with a new format and new leadership.

For many years starting in 2007, Woman’s City Club provided financial support, tutors, and other volunteers for Linda Wihl’s Making Sense of Language Arts tutoring program for kindergartners who would benefit from a multisensory literacy intervention for one or more hours a week. It’s a phonics based multisensory literacy program for kindergartners that has been used effectively with children in Rothenberg and Winton Hills Academy as well as other schools. Pre- and post- testing documented that most children made good to excellent progress by the end of school year, knowing the letter sounds, forming simple words, and beginning to read.

In the last few years, the program has only taken place as part of an afterschool program at Winton Hills Academy three days a week. Children did not attend consistently. Most of the tutors came one or two days and may not have worked with the same child. The MSLA program was still at the center of the program and children made good progress.

Linda retired at the end of last school year for health reasons. Last year she was ably assisted by two volunteers, Sue Ivory and Sue Carfagna (now on medical leave), who are now leading the program.

Linda Wihl to

This year there is no afterschool program. Under the revised program, the kindergarten teachers identify children to be part of a 45-minute in-school literacy program twice a week. Tutors can work with the same child at least once a week.

Fewer WCC members help out now (other tutors are recruited elsewhere) but the wonderful women who are managing the program are open to more volunteers if we can recruit them.

MEMBERS AND FRIENDS

If you enjoy working with small children and see them progress – and if you have about 45 minutes on Wednesday and/or Thursday at 11 am – you may want to volunteer. Lesson pages of the curriculum and materials for working with each child are provided. For more information and to volunteer, email Sarah Gideonse, chair of the Education Action Group, at SarahGideonse@womanscityclub.org. Thank you!
